The photoplay Where Are My Children? which is being created such a tremendous sensation in Boston, will be seen at Davis theatre beginning next Monday, Nov. 20, for three days only.

Where Are My Children? is not an advocacy of birth control, although there is in the picture an apparent sympathy for the poor enthusiast who is convicted of circulating obscene literature which is only a pamphlet advocating the regulation of the families, especially of the poor. But it is the play, does advocate doing away with the false modesty which prevents a mother imparting knowledge as to sex hygiene to her daughter, and shows in a striking manner how she prevents a mother of one mother to do her duty along that line results in the shame and death of her darling child.

The story of the district attorney doomed to a childless old age because of his wife, a gay butterfly of society, who prefers life in the city to the pleasures to the joys of motherhood, is told with delicacy and acted with a fineness of touch and a permit of no offense.

The Breeds will also present the fifth chapter of The Crimson Stain Mystery. Coming to Davis Theatre Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The photoplay Where Are My Children? which is being created such a tremendous sensation in Boston, will be seen at Davis theatre beginning next Monday, Nov. 20, for three days only.

Where Are My Children? is not an advocacy of birth control, although there is in the picture an apparent sympathy for the poor enthusiast who is convicted of circulating obscene literature which is only a pamphlet advocating the regulation of the families, especially of the poor. But it is the play, does advocate doing away with the false modesty which prevents a mother imparting knowledge as to sex hygiene to her daughter, and shows in a striking manner how she prevents a mother of one mother to do her duty along that line
